Understanding 'Dynamic' Adaptive Equipment: More than just moving parts

The word 'Dynamic' is tagged extremely often alongside the features of paediatric adaptive management equipment, but its use can have a variety of different meanings. As such, this very simple word has become quite convoluted, and at times confusing, to therapists in their aims of prescription and to adaptive equipment users and their carers in their understanding of the equipment they use.

This seminar aims to provide a general overview of how and why Dynamic movement can be incorporated into seating, standing and gait training paediatric adaptive equipment. We hope to remind our audience that life is never static! And neither should adaptive equipment or postural care approaches be.

and how to support them to develop those skills.

It will include discussion about when and how the skills for toilet training should be introduced and provide practical hints and tips. There will also be information about available resources and where to access support.

Toilet-training for children with complex physical disabilities

Neurodisability and toilet training are not terms that typically go hand in hand, with a variety of factors making the task often appear insurmountable. This seminar offers parents and therapists an introduction to an innovative toilet training approach for children with complex physical disabilities. Recognising that it isn't a simple lightbulb moment of learning, this novel approach centred on the principles of neuroplasticity and inspired by holistic therapy techniques will demonstrate the neurological foundation skills required for success. Evidenced by real-life case stories, attendees will come away with a step-by-step understanding of how to approach training and recognise the many benefits. Resources will be made available for all attendees.

Emotionally Based School Avoidance (EBSA): Solutions to help

EBSA has been called many things including school refusal and persistent absence; the key feature is that the child is unable to go to school due to factors related to their emotional needs or wellbeing. Pupils out of school are more at risk of poor mental health and are missing out on important learning experiences.

There is also the risk of negative impact on the resilience of the whole family. Support is needed at home and in school, through a joined-up approach. In this session learn about the assessment that we do, to review the environmental factors that might be impacting the individual, and some of the solutions we put in place to ensure the pupil is supported to access school again.
